Dear Authors,

ORCID (the Open Researcher and Contributor ID) is an international, cross-publisher system of identification for authors. An ORCID identifier is unique to an individual and acts as a persistent digital identifier to ensure that authors (particularly those with relatively common names) can be distinguished and their published work properly attributed.

How do I use it?

JZUS A/B/C supports ORCID, allowing authors/reviewers to enter their unique identifier when submitting manuscripts/comments to the journals. ORCID is also supported by many other publishers and research funders, so you can use the same identifier when publishing in different journals or submitting grant applications.

How do I get one?

Register on the ORCID site - it only takes 30 seconds. The ORCID obtained is a 16-digit number, such as 0000-0002-0375-1268.

What next?

Please add your ORCID to your user record on the JZUS-B submission system, Editorial Manager Manuscript, so that the next time you submit a manuscript/comment it's already there. At the same time, please take a few moments to update the keywords associated with your account to make sure that we send you the most appropriate manuscripts to review. You can also update your email preferences to ensure that you are receiving the latest developments from the journal.

Thanks
JZUS-C editorial office
