

Cite this as: Haoxin CUI, Naymul KARIM, Feng JIANG, Haimei HU, Wei CHEN. Assessment of quality deviation of pork and salmon due to temperature fluctuations during superchilling[J]. Journal of Zhejiang University Science B, 2022, 23(7): 578-586.
<http://doi.org/10.1631/jzus.B2200030>

Assessment of quality deviation of pork and salmon due to temperature fluctuations during superchilling

Key words: Pork; Salmon; Superchilling; Temperature fluctuations;

Meat quality

Research Summary

- This article highlighted the importance of knowledge on the “proper uses of superchilling temperature for storing meat products, especially pork and salmon”

Content:

Pork

Salmon

- Pork loins and salmon fillets were stored for several days (0, 8, 15, 23, and 30 days) under different temperature fluctuations based on -3.5°C as the target temperature
- Determination of physical and chemical indicators, sensory indicators and microbial indicators
- The changes of cell tissue structure and protein properties under different superchilling temperature conditions

Innovation points

- Models of temperature fluctuations during superchilling were designed
- $\pm 2^{\circ}\text{C}$ temperature fluctuations and irregular temperature changes accelerated the spoilage of pork and salmon
- For the first time, the influence of the temperature fluctuation range in the refrigerator on the quality of pork and salmon under slightly freezing conditions was systematically explored